'THE GODDESS'

FEATURING ANITA STEWART and EARLE WILLIAMS
"WITH BRIDGES BURNED"

A THREE ACT EDISON DRAMA PRESENTING
MABEL TRUNNELLE AND AUGUSTUS PHILLIPS

Adapted from the famous story by Rex Beach.

"With Bridges Burned" is a feature, full of the finest impulses and worthiest motives that can actuate a man. It thrills with the intensity of a devoted man and wife, stricken in fortune, separated on their wedding day and doing deeds as desperate in self-denial as any physical daring. To see so fine—so worthy—a picture is to feel that the world is a better place than we thought.

WANT ARTILLERY FOR FARMERS DAY

Would Have Exhibition Drill here on Saturday, October Ninth. Will also try to have Soldiers Participate in the Parade.

In response to a request made this morning by the management of Farmers' Day, Congressman Beales consented to take steps to secure the participation of Battery F, 3d United States Field Artillery in the parade here that day, and also to have the battery give an exhibition drill at some place near town where the large crowds may witness the soldiers in action.

If the effort is successful it will mean decidedly the biggest Farmers' Day feature ever provided in this section. The parade will be a pretentious affair at all events, the various civic and patriotic organizations throughout the county being invited to take part while two or three bands will be in line. Should the battery be secured, it will be exceptionally attractive.

Battery F has now been encamped here for several weeks and will remain until after the dedication of the Webb monument on October 12. It was announced some days ago that exhibition drills would be given during their stay here and no more appropriate time could be chosen than Saturday, October 9, when thousands of persons will be here to witness their maneuvers. A request for a similar demonstration during the Hanover Fair was acceded to, and there seems to be no reason why local efforts should not be equally successful.

The College Band has been secured to take part in the parade and to give a short concert afterward. The terms asked by the Citizens' Band are acceptable, it is said, and they too will be in line, while the management has received a very reasonable offer from the fine Knights of Pythias Band of Hanover who have agreed to come at one o'clock in the afternoon, take part in the parade and give a concert of several hours afterward. It is likely that they will be engaged, also.

The free attractions will be of the very best obtainable and the widely distributed premium list speaks volumes for the liberality of Gettysburg business houses. The attendance should be a record breaker.

INTERESTING FIGURES

Cost of Campaign Tour is Told in Filed Statement.

Dr. E. D. Hudson's unique, though unsuccessful, campaign for the Democratic nomination for county treasurer, cost him just $462.53, according to his expense account filed this morning with Clerk of the Courts Olinger. The ventriloquist who accompanied him on the tour of the county and gave short entertainments at a number of places was paid $60 for his services while his board bill amounted to $20. Other expenses of each lecture amounted to $4.00, while an item of $120 is given for thirty days' traveling expenses. Printing and advertising amounted to something like $125 and small items made up the balance.

PRESBYTERY MEETS

This County Included in District Covered by Church Body.

With 100 delegates in attendance, the regular fall meeting of the Presbytery of Carlisle opened in the Big Spring Presbyterian Church, at Newville, this morning, and will continue two days. The Presbytery of Carlisle covers the territory of Dauphin, Lebanon, Perry, Cumberland, Adams, Franklin and Fulton counties, and has within its bounds fifty-three churches and a communicant membership of 11,601. The members met here last spring at the time of the 175th anniversary of the local organization.

THERE EVERY DAY

SMALL DEFICIT IN THE TREASURY

Gettysburg Base Ball Team Directors Go over Receipts and Expenses for Past Year and Find that Season Showed Slight Loss.

At a session of the directors of the Gettysburg Blue Ridge League team held Monday evening it was discovered that, after all collections are made, and all bills paid, the management will face a deficit for the season of 1915 of $200.

There are bills outstanding of about $300. Of the subscriptions made at the beginning of the season $200 yet remains to be collected and the work of getting this money in hand will be taken up immediately. The matter of securing a loan to meet all bills will then be considered. Nothing was said about the manner of financing the opening weeks of next year's season but it is presumed that, unless money is secured from the sale of one or more players, another subscription will be taken.

The expense account this year was greater than it will be in succeeding seasons. In the first place, a large sum of money was spent in June in experimenting with players. Men were coming and going almost every day and the salary account was necessarily larger than it would have been with a regular squad. In addition, $134 was spent for the grandstand and players' benches, an expense that will not be necessary next year, while all the receipts from the former will be "velvet."

The item next largest in size to the players' salaries was the traveling expense account. This went well on to the $2000 mark, in spite of every effort made to keep it down. The lessons learned this year will prove most valuable in 1916, it is said, and the expense of running the team will be from $500 to $1000 less than during the first summer of organized baseball in Gettysburg.

Though the treasury shows a deficit, it is so small that those who are conversant with conditions elsewhere feel that the town has made an exceptionally good showing, particularly as the team was in last place for almost the entire season. In other minor leagues it is considered unusual for a town to come out without a large deficit and Gettysburg is to be congratulated on the support given.

Hanover is one of the towns in the Blue Ridge League where there is also a deficit due, it is said, to a great falling off in attendance during the last two weeks of the season.

QUICK WORK

Striking Proof of The Times Advertising Value is Given.

A small display ad on the inside of Monday's Times resulted in the immediate sale of a stove for a local advertiser. The buyer was waiting when the owner of the stove returned from work and several others called since then to inspect it.

The local for a saleslady in a Gettysburg store, inserted on Saturday, has brought a number of desirable applicants.

A part of an automobile lamp advertised in The Times as lost between Bienville and Hunterstown has been found and the owner located by means of a local in this paper.

Three striking examples in as many days of the manner in which The Times gets the results desired.

HERRIL STARS

Allows but Two Scratch Hits and Fans Fifteen Men.

Walter Herril, one of Gettysburg's reservists, pitched a wonderful game for the Western Enterprise team of Haverstown, against the Whetstone Club, of Waynesboro, last Saturday. The score was 18 to 1.

Herril's team did not score until the fifth but after that had easy sailing. The Gettysburg pitcher struck out fifteen and gave only two hits.

DATE CHANGE

Teachers and Patrons will not Meet until October 8.

The teachers' educational meeting of Hamilton township will be held at the Station schoolhouse on Friday evening, October 8th, instead of this Friday evening, as first announced.

URGE PATTERSON FOR COMMANDER

Was Prominently Identified with Arrangements for Gettysburg's Big Anniversary Celebration. This State Wants his Election.

William J. Patterson, a member of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg Commission, and well known here, is being vigorously urged as a candidate for commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic. The election will take place during the present encampment at Washington. He will be supported by all the veterans of the Keystone state.

Mr. Patterson entered the military service of the United States in July 1861, as lieutenant of Company F, Second Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry; was wounded in the battle of Gettysburg; incapacitated for active service and resigned his commission Oct. 3, 1863.

He organized Post No. 157 in 1880, and four times was commander. In 1898 he was unanimously elected department commander. For 10 years he served as Pennsylvania's member of the national council of administration, and now is serving his eighth term on the executive committee. For the last six years he has been a member of the soldiers' orphan school commission of the state; was a member of the Pennsylvania commission for the fiftieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg, and was seven years president of the board of managers of Soldiers' and Sailors' Memorial Hall, of Pittsburgh.

Thirty thousand veterans are expected to participate in the grand review Wednesday. President Wilson will review the procession from a grandstand in front of the White House, where President Johnson stood in 1865 to review the conquering army.

PICKLE MAN HERE

But Did not Register here under his Own Name.

H. J. Heinz, the millionaire creator of the 57 varieties, spent several hours on the Gettysburg battlefield to-day. He came with some friends who registered at the Eagle Hotel as "S. J. Stoughton and party" and his visit here would not have been noted had not some one noticed the initials "H. J. H." on the door of his large Pierce Arrow car, and later recognized Mr. Heinz himself. The Pittsburgher is on his way to Philadelphia where he will reside next week at the State Sabbath School Association convention. He has been at the head of the organization for a number of years and was its presiding officer when the convention met in Gettysburg in 1906.

General H. S. Huidekoper, chairman of the Pennsylvania Gettysburg Monument Commission is also a visitor here to-day.

TWO HURT

Boy Hurt while Playing. Woman has Arm Broken.

William Lawrence Stambaugh, a six year old son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Stambaugh, of Berlin Junction, was injured at his home Saturday afternoon, while playing with several companions. He had crawled onto a shed roof and his companions pushed over the barn door near him, which knocked him off the roof. In falling to the ground he cut a large gash in his forehead. The lad was taken to New Oxford, where the injury was dressed by a physician.

Mrs. Sarah Sell, of East Berlin, fell in front of her home on Monday afternoon and broke her left arm.

DAY LATER

Veterans are Coming on Thursday and Friday.

The two excursions to be run by the Western Maryland to Gettysburg from the Grand Army encampment in Washington will come on Thursday and Friday, returning Friday and Saturday. The original announcement gave one day earlier in each instance.

RURAL TEACHERS ARRANGE TO MEET

Plan Annual Series of Educational Gatherings at Various County School Houses. Bring Patrons in to Closer Touch.

In order to bring about a closer relation between the home and the school, and in order to profit by each other's experiences, the teachers of many of the school districts in the county are announcing the first of their series of educational meetings for the winter months. Topics of interest not only to the teachers, but also to the patrons, are given for discussion at each meeting.

When the idea of holding these sessions was first conceived several years ago, some of the teachers converted what was to be an educational meeting into sort of an entertainment, but this objection has now been met and just a few entertainment features are provided by the pupils, and the greater part of the evening given up to more practical discussions.

Not only have teachers and patrons taken an interest in these meetings but school directors and teachers from adjoining townships frequently attend, so that the sessions come to be regular community affairs and provide monthly events to which all are coming to look forward with no little eagerness.

During the rural school term of seven months five or six of these meetings are held in each of the majority of the districts, so that all of the teachers get an opportunity to take part in the discussions. This year County Superintendent Roth and Assistant Superintendent Rice will make an effort to attend as many of the meetings as possible.

While the rural schools will have the sessions, almost every town in the county now has, or will have by the end of the year, its Parent Teachers Association where teachers and others interested in the cause of education can take up and discuss topics concerning the schools. The success of the Gettysburg Association has been a matter of frequent comment.

BIG WRECK

Twenty-One Coal Cars Wrecked on the Western Maryland.

Twenty-one coal cars were wrecked Sunday on the Western Maryland Railroad, just opposite Keyser. The wreck was caused by a broken flange. No one is known to have been injured, but the engineer said he saw two tramps board the train shortly before the accident. A search was made and one man was found under a car in the wreckage. He was only slightly injured. The other tramp has not been seen and it is feared he is under the wreckage.

WILLIAM G. LEAS TAKEN BY DEATH

Widely Known Business Man Dies at his Home in East Berlin. Lumber Merchant, Banker, and Owner of County Railroad.

WILLIAM G. LEAS

After an illness of ten days following a stroke of apoplexy, sustained while in Gettysburg, William G. Leas died at one o'clock Monday afternoon at his home in East Berlin, aged 57 years. He had improved during the early days of his illness and last Thursday was taken to his home. In spite of the care of three physicians he sank rapidly.

Mr. Leas was born in Hamilton township, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Leas. For some years he conducted a warehouse in East Berlin and engaged in the lumber business. He helped to organize a banking house which now operates successfully as the First National Bank of East Berlin. About fifteen years ago after his planing mill at East Berlin was destroyed by fire he moved the machinery to York and has since conducted a highly successful plant there.

Recently Mr. Leas was much in public print through his ownership of the East Berlin Railway which he purchased from the receiver about a year ago, and part of which he had turned up. Negotiations for its purchase were under way at the time of his death.

His wife, Ellen Baker Leas, died about fifteen years ago, and he leaves two daughters, Miss Sara Leas and Miss Beulah Leas, both at home.

Funeral services at his late home at two o'clock Thursday afternoon. Interment at Mummert's Meeting House.

CHLOE IRENE FOUST

Chloe Irene Foust, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Foust, died in the York hospital Monday morning at 4:45 after a week's illness from typhoid fever and meningitis. She was aged 8 years, 5 months, and 5 days. She leaves her parents and two sisters, Nettie and Beulah Foust, both at home.

The body was brought by automobile to the home of her mother in Huntingdon township Monday evening by W. O. Routsong. The funeral will be held from there Wednesday afternoon at 1:30, conducted by Rev. Charles Brown, of East Berlin. Interment at Heidersburg. Friends and relatives will accept this as a notice of the funeral.

COUNTY WINS CASE

Cannot Hold up Funds on Account of Township's Tardiness.

Through the decision of Judge Kunkel, of Dauphin County, handed down Monday, Adams County was its suit to recover $2032.62 which had been held up by the State Treasurer because Straban township had not paid its share of the State-aid road constructed in that district several years ago. The ruling forbids the State Treasurer to apply to such a township account money due the county, and will release not only the amount for which suit was brought but about $5000 more now due this county from the State for various purposes.

MEETING NOTICES

Farmers' Day, Firemen's Drill, and Odd Fellows' Session.

All interested in plans for Farmers' Day will meet at 7:30 this evening in the office of Walter's Theatre.

All Odd Fellows are urged to be present at the regular meeting this evening. Refreshments will be served at its close.

The firemen will meet at 7 o'clock Wednesday evening at the Engine House for drill.

GUIDE ARRESTED

Assault and Battery is the Charge Preferred.

On information laid by Ray Hoffman, clerk at Hotel Gettysburg, a warrant was served Monday afternoon on James McDonnell, charging him with assault and battery. Mr. McDonnell gave bail for a hearing before Squire Hill at three o'clock this afternoon.

U.S. MARINE SLAIN, 10 HURT IN HAYTI

American Forces Drive Rebels Before Them.

KILL FIFTY IN TWO FIGHTS

The Dead Man is Sergeant John Platt—Many Natives Were Wounded Before Quiet Was Restored.

Washington, Sept. 28.—Details of fighting between natives and American forces near Cape Haitien, in which John Platt, a sergeant of marines, was killed, ten marines were wounded, and more than fifty Haytians were killed, reached the navy department in messages from Rear Admiral Caperton.

The casualties among the Americans follow:
Killed—Sergeant John Platt, twenty-fourth company, marines, killed. He was in the service for fourteen years. His next of kin is his sister, Mrs. Susett Blanchard, of North Brookfield, Mass.

Slightly wounded—Corporal George W. Strout, eleventh company, first regiment marines, Baltimore, right shoulder, and Vincent Gage, seaman on the battleship Connecticut, Camden, N. J., right shoulder.

Slightly wounded—Marine Privates Howard Parsons Youngs, Portland, Ore.; Charles Frederick Schropp, Pittsburgh; Julius Cooley, Westville, Fla.; Goss Jordan, Goose Creek, Va.; Frank John Brande, Brooklyn; Bernard C. Glasner, New Bedford, Mass.

Nature of injuries unknown—Marine Privates Frederick W. Reaman, Norfolk, Va., and John Wittek, Newark, N. J.

The marine patrols had been sent out to clear the lines of supply from Cape Haitien to the interior.

The first expedition sent out Saturday afternoon, to Haut du Cap and Petit Anse, near the city, and on the main line of supplies, passed native outposts, whose commanders objected to the expeditions, but offered no resistance. The next day, two patrols went out again, and after the expedition reached Haut du Cap, firing became general and both patrols were engaged.

About fifty natives were killed. The patrols returned to Cape Haitien, last night, and Admiral Caperton reported the supply routes had been completely cleared of hostile forces.

A later message said Captain Underwood, led an expedition of fifty mounted marines to Petit Riviere and Dalarte Bonitte Sunday, and encountered 150 armed Haytians. They were driven into the hills after a vigorous skirmish, in which Platt met his death, two natives were killed and three natives wounded.

The marines are holding the two towns, where quiet has been restored.

Words reached Washington that the committee of the Haytian parliament that has been considering the proposed American treaty under which the United States will establish a virtual protectorate over Hayti will report within a day or two. It is confidently expected the report will be favorable, and that ratification will follow in short order.

11 MINERS ENTOMBED

Little Hope for Those Trapped at Coal Mine by Fall of Rock.

Wilkes-Barre, Sept. 28.—Eleven mine workers are entombed at the Coal Mine colliery of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company, at Coaldale, near Lansford, as the result of a fall of rock.

The rock fall was caused by a heavy blast and extends for three hundred feet, blocking the single passage leading to the chamber in which the men were at work.

Although rescue workers are laboring to clear away the wreckage officials estimate that it will be at least two days before the entombed men are reached. Hope of finding any of the men alive has already been given up.

BRITISH WARSHIP SUNK

Fleet Suffers From Shore Fire While Attacking Germans at Zebrugga.

Berlin, Sept. 28.—One British warship was sunk and two others were damaged in the attack by a British squadron on German batteries along the Belgian coast, especially at Zebrugga, simultaneously with the launching of the allied new offensive movement on land, according to the German official statement of September 26. After these losses, the British ships withdrew.

French Transport Sunk

Berlin, Sept. 28.—A despatch to the Frankfurter Zeitung from Athens says that a French transport of 5000 tons has been sunk by an Austrian submarine in the Libyan sea, says the Overseas News Agency. The vessel was carrying coal from Malta to Cyprus.

BULGARS REPORTED MOVING ON SERBS

To Invade Macedonia and Threaten Border.

Berlin, Sept. 28.—A despatch from Sofia, given out here by the Overseas News Agency, says it is rumored that Bulgaria has sent an ultimatum to Serbia, and that the diplomatic representatives of the entente powers in Bulgaria are preparing to depart. The despatch adds that this rumor has not been confirmed.

Moving on Serbia

Paris, Sept. 28.—Two Bulgarian armies are already moving, one to invade Macedonia, the other to remain on the frontier of Serbia proper and strike that country if it opposes the Bulgarian occupation of territory wrested from it after it defeated Turkey, according to a despatch from Milan.

A Sofia despatch says that railway service between Bulgaria and Serbia has been suspended by orders of the Bulgarian government. A strict censorship is in effect. The use of code is forbidden in despatches and all letters must be posted unsealed.

The French censor still refuses to pass despatches describing the preparations made to meet the Bulgars, but publication of the following statement by Stephen Pichon, former foreign minister, was permitted: "At this moment the French and English must already have troops on shore at the terminus of the Serbian line of supplies."

A despatch from Lausanne quotes a "member of the Bulgarian cabinet as stating that war can be avoided only by Serbia immediately ceding to Bulgaria the disputed zone in Macedonia."

TURKS SIEGE U. S. MISSIONS

Friction Threatened Over Tax Claims; Investigating Armenian Outrages.

Washington, Sept. 28.—American mission property in Turkey is being seized by that government, according to unofficial advices reaching the state department.

This news was received with concern, as it was feared that Turkey's aggressive actions may provoke a critical situation between it and this government.

Mission properties seized by the government had been exempt from taxation until last fall when the Turkish government ruled that all property owned by foreigners was to be subject to taxation in the future. The United States, it is known, has never acknowledged the legality of this ruling. The Turkish government seized the properties and sold them for delinquent taxes.

Henry Morgenthau, United States ambassador at Constantinople, was instructed to inquire into reported outrages against Armenians in Turkey, to ascertain if any victims are American citizens.

The reported murder of two American missionaries is unconfirmed.

Kills Wife and Tries Suicide

New York, Sept. 28.—Arthur J. The couple had been married for forty years, and it is believed Hanna was insane.

CZAR'S OFFENSIVE CHECKS INVADERS

Germans Are Driven Back on Big Front.

RETAKE 7 FORTIFIED TOWNS

Russians Hurl Terrific Assault on 250 Mile Line from Dvina River to Pripiet Marshes.

Petrograd, Sept. 28.—Russian troops are on the offensive along the entire 250-mile front from the Dvina river, south of Dvinsk, to the Pripiet Marshes, near Pinsk.

They have recaptured seven fortified villages of strategic importance which had to be evacuated when General Evert's forces retreated, following the abandonment of Vilna.

These villages were won back by desperate fighting, in which the Germans were placed on the defensive and driven back along the front from four to fifteen miles. The Teutonic troops attempted to regain them with counter attacks, but reports received by the war office say that these assaults are less vigorous than those previously made by the Kaiser's troops, indicating that the strength of the German army has been sapped.

The villages recaptured are Drisvlaty, Resterka, Ghirty, Ostrow, Podgurie, Koltehtitz and Podlugie.

Repeated raids by the cossacks have resulted in seriously crippling the supply department of the German armies. Their lines have been cut repeatedly. The army of Field Marshal von Mackensen has been a particular sufferer in this respect.

On Saturday a force of cossacks which had been hidden in the Pripiet Marshes made a sudden dash upon the railroad west of Pinsk. They wrecked two miles of this and destroyed two trains carrying supplies to von Mackensen's forces in Pinsk.

Another band of cossacks, who are continually showing their superiority over the German cavalry, crossed the Strument river, burned German supplies and then recrossed, burning the Statcheff bridge to prevent pursuit.

Bombarded Russian Warships.

Berlin, Sept. 28.—The official war office statement on the situation in the eastern theatre of war, tells of the bombardment of Russian warships in the Gulf of Riga and gains in other sectors of the front.

The official statement follows: "In the Gulf of Riga Russian men of war, including one ship of the line, were attacked by German aviators. Hits were observed on the line ship and on a torpedo boat destroyer. The Russians steamed away in a northerly direction."

"On the southwestern front, of Dvinsk another position was captured from the enemy. Nine officers and more than 1300 men were taken prisoners and two machine guns were captured."

"West of Vileika our attack continued. South of Smorgon we repulsed strong counter attacks of the enemy. Our troops made progress between Krewo and Wischew. The right wing of this army and the army of Prince Leopold have reached the western bank of the Niemen at Schtschersi."

"Sedwetsch and the Szczara have been cleared of the enemy. East of Baranovitch the enemy still holds some small bridge heads. Fighting continues along the entire front."

WILL RECALL DUMBA

Austria Will Comply With President Wilson's Request.

Washington, Sept. 28.—Austria has informally notified Ambassador Penfield that it will recall Dr. Dumba, the Austrian ambassador to the United States, as requested by President Wilson.

This information was given to Ambassador Penfield, when he informally advised the Austrian officials, on instructions from Washington, that the United States sought the "recall" of Dr. Dumba and would not be satisfied with his departure on leave of absence.

Mr. Penfield was assured that the wishes of the United States would be complied with, and a formal note on the subject would be handed to him soon. Until the formal expression is in the hands of state department officials, they cannot act upon the ambassador's request for safe conduct. Dr. Dumba had engaged passage on the steamship Rotterdam, due to sail September 29, but it is not known whether arrangements can be made in time for him to leave on that date.

Turks Gain at Anafarta

Constantinople, Sept. 28.—Part of the positions on the Turkish left wing at Anafarta, which had been occupied by the entente allies in the Gallipoli peninsula operations, has been retaken by the Turks, according to an official statement issued at Turkish army headquarters.

German Gold Ship Seized

Genoa, Sept. 28.—The Spanish Pack at Luis Vives, of Valencia, seized by the police, turns out to be a German treasure ship. The authorities found on board 100,000 lire ($20,000) in gold, which, it is charged, was destined for Germany. The captain was arrested.

20 KILLED, 200 HURT WHEN OIL EXPLODES

Gasoline Car Bursts and Makes Funeral Pyre.

Ardmore, Okla., Sept. 28.—Twenty people are believed to be dead, at least two hundred are injured, and property worth at least five hundred thousand dollars was destroyed by fire here when a 250-barrel Sante Fe tank car filled with gasoline exploded.

Many of the dead are women. The force of the explosion threw burning oil all over the city and more than thirty fires were burning at one time.

A dense pall of smoke settled over the city, adding to the confusion. Martial law was declared to prevent looting.

When the passenger and freight stations were destroyed by the explosion it is said every person in it was killed.

The tank car that exploded was fifty yards from the station. The tremendous outburst of the gasoline itself wrecked many buildings, the flaming fluid was hurled in every direction, and scores of fires broke out immediately. Fifteen persons were killed by the explosion itself. A large part of the town soon was in flames. Ten blocks of business buildings caught fire and some of the victims were killed there.

The Whittington hotel, a half block from the station, was reported completely wrecked and about fifty persons injured.

THE TRANSYLVANIA SUNK

Big Liner Reported Destroyed by U-Boat in Mediterranean.

New York, Sept. 28.—According to private advices received here, the large British transport reported sunk off the island of Crete, in the Mediterranean, by a German submarine, was the Cunarder Transylvania.

The big liner, a 14,000-ton vessel, 548 feet long, had been chartered by the British government to carry troops to the Dardanelles. She was built only two years ago at Greenock. Before the British government took her over she plied on the route between New York and Liverpool.

$18,000 Blaze in Lancaster

Lancaster, Pa., Sept. 27.—Fire of unknown origin completely demolished the St. Anthony's Lyceum hall. The damage is estimated at $18,000. The building contained a gymnasium, parochial school and a large auditorium.

While fighting the blaze, Fire Chief Johnson was severely cut on the face by glass. After his injuries had been treated he returned to the fire and directed his men in their work.

Killed in Quarrel

York, Pa., Sept. 28.—Struck in the face by his brother-in-law, Roy Reynolds, during an altercation, Lawrence Singleton, 23 years old, of State Hill, was instantly killed when his head struck a stone with such violence that his neck was broken.

MANY EXHIBITS FOR YORK FAIR

Everything Points to Highly Successful Event in Neighboring County Next Week. Displays will be High Class.

York's big fair will begin next week and continue five days. The season's crops have been so abundant that the display in certain departments will be excessive, and the varieties larger and better than ever before.

Henry C. Heckert, the secretary, has set 2800 plates for the fruits and other displays in the Horticultural Hall. The flowers, garden vegetables and display of corn and other grains will be in abundance. The farmers, who have been looking forward to the exhibition, have gathered the best raised in the county. Mr. Heckert says that not before has there been such a display of peaches and apples. About $18,000 will be given out in premiums.

D. G. Deardorff, who has charge of the Midway, has about 20 big shows, and many other special attractions. Whether he will permit a wide-open avenue or not remains to be seen. Mr. Deardorff has been very cautious in not permitting anything in his department that would cause uneasiness to the committee on vice and immorality. He usually scrutinizes his department. He finds it a difficult matter to make the fakirs behave. They are bound to slip one over occasionally.

John Rutter will have between 75 and 80 displays of machinery, automobiles, carriages and wagons. He reports in his department an advance of about 15 or 20 displays over last year. Already the exhibitors are unloading.

John E. Baker and Joseph Anderson are looking after the cattle department. There are five large barns and many stalls. They house between 400 and 500 head of stock. A lot of these have already come in, and judging from the reports, they will have a splendid display.

Herb D. Smyser is making the entries for the speed tests. There will be some good horses there. A number of them have already come in. He will also have general supervision over the free attractions. About $6,100 will be given out in his department for the track events.

Wednesday and Thursday nights here will be fireworks, balloon ascensions and parachute drops.

Find Roosts in Chimneys.

Swallows, after a day spent in skimming the air and catching insects, will seek a roosting place at night. The chimney swift soars about until after sunset and then suddenly darts into some chimney. These birds have very sharp-pointed claws and cling on the sides of the sooty flues.

"MILLIONAIRE KID" EARNIS HIS LIVING

Learns the Value of Dollar by Working For It.

HUNGRY, HE SLEPT IN PARK

Donald Murphy, Son of Multimillionaire Lumberman, Relates His Experiences. For Long Time Lived on One Meal a Day. Cost Between Fifteen and Twenty Cents.

Don Murphy has learned the value of a dollar. He is the son of Albert M. Murphy, the multimillionaire lumberman of Green Bay, Wis. Until now his father's purse always has been open to the prodigal son.

But the purse strings have been drawn, and the youth has been advised to "learn the value of a dollar."

Don has sought a royal road to knowledge in vain. He joined the navy and was hazed because his father was rich. His cousin gave him a job riding horses at the stockyards. One threw him on his head.

The story road of hard knocks is the one the young man finally had to take to learn his lesson.

His own story in the Chicago Herald is as follows:

"I was born with a silver spoon in my mouth, but it did not stay there."

"In January my father told me to go and make my own living and learn the value of a dollar."

Soon Loses His Job.

"Well, I thought that would be easy. So I went to Helena, Ark., where I worked for a lumber company for five months. They laid me off on the 13th of August, as there was not enough work. Not finding any position down there, I started for Chicago."

"I arrived here on the 15th of August and started to look for work on the same day, but could not find anything."

"I did not have a cent and did not know where I was going to sleep. I happened to meet a friend who was kind enough to give me a room and a little money with which to get something to eat."

"I would eat only one meal a day, as I wished to learn the pains of hunger, so in case I had to I would be in trim to meet that funny feeling—and, let me say that one meal a day is no seven course dinner. When this had gone on for a few weeks I began to realize that a dollar would not last me as long as it ever had before."

"My one meal would cost me between 15 and 20 cents. Then, if I got hungry I would go into a saloon, first by the front door, and get a lunch, then go out and rush in the back door, as if I had not been in the place before, and eat some more."

"This went on for a few days until I was caught by a saloon bouncer who threatened to give me a licking. Rather than argue the matter I left in a hurry. He looked like Jess Willard to me. I told him he would have to run some if he wished to whip me."

Sleeps in Station.

"One Saturday morning I awoke to the fact that I did not have a cent and was told that I would have to get out of my room if I could not pay the bill, so I left my suit case for security and started out again to look for work."

"That night I went to the Northwestern station and slept until 3 a. m. A policeman awoke me and told me to get out or he would run me in, so I went over to the Union station and slept until 7 o'clock."

"As there was nothing else to do Sunday, I went down to Grant park to sit and think if I would be only home what a nice meal I would be having. But no such luck! While I was sitting there a fellow who looked every inch a hobo asked me if I could give him a little money. When I told him I was just as much down and out as he was I surprised him. He said I was well dressed and surely must have some money. I told him if a person was well dressed that was no sign he had money."

"Sunday night came, and I started to sleep in the park, but a policeman had to interrupt me, so I went back to the Union station. In the morning I began to feel faint, but could not see anything to eat coming my way."

"As I happened to be passing a room in a building where I was looking for work I spied an old friend, but would not tell him my troubles. He asked me out to dinner that night. I ordered everything from soup to nuts."

"Now, if this experience is not enough to teach one the value of a dollar I don't know what is."

"Above all, I have learned three things—first, mind your parents; second, don't think because your father has money you don't have to work; third, above all, be honest."

CANCER ON INCREASE.

Medical Society Urges Action by Health Officials and Doctors.

Figures computed by the cancer commission of the Medical Society of Pennsylvania and submitted to the annual convention of that body show that the death rate from cancer in that state is increasing out of all proportion with the increase in population and that action by health officials and the medical profession has become imperative.

It was pointed out that the hope for reducing the number of deaths lies not in radical operations in advanced cases, but in early treatment.

Aluminum in Surgery.

Aluminum shapes to fit all parts of the human body, pierced with channels for hot or cold water circulation, have been invented by a Viennese surgeon for use as surgical compresses.

The Unexpected

One mocked at death for being strong of limb.

And fearless, death no terrors had for him.

"From out my course I shall not move a jot.

Let him approach at will; I fear him not!"

Yet, when the conqueror whom he thought to meet

As man meets man, erect upon his feet,

Came creeping in long twilight shadows, he

Fell on his knees and writhed in agony.

Another, not self-confident, but frail,

Feared death from his youth upward;

At every shadow which upon his path

Seemed pointing toward him in its somber wrath.

Yet, when death came, not wrapped in lengthened gloom

As all life long this man expected doom,

But sudden in the sunlight, not a trace

Of fear remained; he met him face to face.

NURSE RISKS LIFE TO PROVE GANGRENE CURE.

Brave Woman Seeks to Save Thousands on European Battlefields.

Risking a hideous death to save the thousands of shattered men of European battlefields who are suffering from the most infectious, rapid and fatal of all diseases of war, gangrene, a young English nurse inoculated herself with the deadly bacilli, forcing Dr. Kenneth Taylor, an American, to make use of quinine hydrochloride, which he had not dared to use before.

Dr. Taylor, who is on the staff of the medical college of the University of Minnesota, has been at the American hospital at Neuilly. He experimented with his discovery on animals, with most astounding results, yet he dared not make the final experiments which demanded human subjects. Miss Mary Davies performed an act which is not eclipsed by any on the battlefields by injecting directly into her thigh bone the most virulent cultures.

Well aware that her scheme would be prevented if it became known, she determined, without a word to any one, to risk her life in an attempt to demonstrate the efficacy of the treatment which she was convinced would cure the victims of this dread disease.

Miss Davies took a room across the street from the hospital, whence she sent a letter to Dr. Taylor to come and see her "for the purpose of treating her final experiment," her letter read.

Dr. Taylor, went immediately and hurried her to a private room in the hospital, where he commenced the injections of the new preparation. He did not leave her bedside for twenty-four hours. He says she at all times was cheerful and confident of the outcome and said she injected the culture because she knew he had hesitated to use the cure and also because she wanted to give him a "clean case of gangrene only," without mixed infections, as is generally the case with soldiers.

Within two hours the symptoms developed. The thigh began to swell, but so rapid had been the work of the new medicine the disease never reached a climax. Dr. Taylor, discussing the girl's act, said:

"It was frightfully dangerous, but brave. Whether it proves conclusively that we can henceforth cure gangrene I hesitate even now to affirm, because we checked the disease at the start. However, from now on the new medicine will be administered to soldiers. If our success continues Miss Davies has undoubtedly contributed greatly to science."

Well aware that her scheme would be prevented if it became known, she determined, without a word to any one, to risk her life in an attempt to demonstrate the efficacy of the treatment which she was convinced would cure the victims of this dread disease.

Miss Davies took a room across the street from the hospital, whence she sent a letter to Dr. Taylor to come and see her "for the purpose of treating her final experiment," her letter read.

Dr. Taylor, went immediately and hurried her to a private room in the hospital, where he commenced the injections of the new preparation. He did not leave her bedside for twenty-four hours. He says she at all times was cheerful and confident of the outcome and said she injected the culture because she knew he had hesitated to use the cure and also because she wanted to give him a "clean case of gangrene only," without mixed infections, as is generally the case with soldiers.

Within two hours the symptoms developed. The thigh began to swell, but so rapid had been the work of the new medicine the disease never reached a climax. Dr. Taylor, discussing the girl's act, said:

"It was frightfully dangerous, but brave. Whether it proves conclusively that we can henceforth cure gangrene I hesitate even now to affirm, because we checked the disease at the start. However, from now on the new medicine will be administered to soldiers. If our success continues Miss Davies has undoubtedly contributed greatly to science."

FORD INSPECTS UNDERSEA CRAFT

Sees Submarine at Close Range For First Time.

PRESENT BOAT TOO LARGE.

Professor Parker Describes Tiny Vessel, Which May Revolutionize Naval Warfare—Has Searchlight Beneath Water and Will Be Able to Detect Boats Mile Away.

When Henry Ford saw his first submarine the automobile builder declared he had heard a good deal about the underwater boats, but what he saw surprised him. He thought the boats were entirely too large and too complicated. He visited them in the New York navy yard.

The first submarine Mr. Ford visited was the K-5, which is commanded by Lieutenant Grady. Mr. Ford climbed down the steel stairway from the main deck in the after part of the boat, where the engine room is located. Next he climbed through the after battery quarters, then to the operating compartment and finally to the forward battery compartment and torpedo room.

From the K-5 the party went aboard the Fulton, a submarine tender, and from there to the E-2, another submarine, which also was resting quietly in the navy yard anchorage. On this trip Mr. Ford was joined by Dr. Miller Reese Hutchison, chief engineer of the Edison laboratory, who told the automobile builder of his recent experiments with sea water.

Mr. Ford also was shown a new Diesel oil engine and a Talbot engine, in both of which he was interested. After another visit to the commandant's office Mr. Ford talked.

"It was simply wonderful what I saw," he declared. "Everything is in such fine order in the navy yard; really it could not be any better. Did I get any new ideas from my visit to the submarines? I did. I always learn something new. Can I make use of what I did see and learn? Why, yes, but about that I won't talk just now."

Diminutive Undersea Boat.

The diminutive submarine conceived by Professor Parker of the University of New York and recommended by Henry Ford for adoption by the United States navy is in reality a submersible that acts in the water the same as an aeroplane acts in the air, according to its inventor, who said that he also had invented and patented a searchlight to be used under water which, with the so-called "fishhook," would make the present type submarine obsolete.

It is the desire of Professor Parker to give his invention to the United States. It is his wish to make this contribution to his country's defenses. He would also have the government test his undersea searchlight, which he calls a "helioscope," because it will make possible the detection of lurking submarines and obstacles to navigation at a distance of perhaps more than a mile.

To Make Forty Miles an Hour.

Professor Parker has worked out the idea of the small submersible propelled by a gasoline engine, primarily as a defensive craft. It will have a cruising radius of fifty miles and a speed of perhaps forty miles an hour. In defensive operations a small fleet of these vessels could be carried on the decks of a mother ship and sent out to meet the invaders. Because of their speed they should be more easily elude destroyers and other submarines, run close up to vessels of the invading fleet and discharge their torpedoes with great accuracy.

On the other hand, the submersibles of an invading fleet may be detected by the beams of the helioscope sweeping undersea areas. This detector, Professor Parker suggests, is more readily adaptable to torpedo boat destroy

CHAPTER XIX. The Quiet Afternoon.

PENROD'S middle aged people might discern nature's real intentions in the matter of pain if they would examine a boy's punishments and sorrows, for he prolongs neither beyond their actual duration. With a boy, trouble must be of heroic dimensions to last overnight. To him, every next day is really a new day. Thus, Penrod woke next morning, with neither the injured rod, nor Mr. Knosling in his mind. Tar, itself, so far as his consciousness of it went, might have been an undigested substance. His mood was cheerful and mercantile; some process having worked mysteriously within him, during the night, to the result that his first waking thought was of profits connected with the sale of old iron—or perhaps a ragman had passed the house, just before he woke.

By 10 o'clock he had formed a partnership with the indefatigable Sam, and the firm of Schofield & Williams planned headlong into commerce. Heavy dealings in rags, paper, old iron and lead gave the firm a balance of 22 cents on the evening of the third day, but a venture is glassware, following, proved disappointing on account of the skepticism of all the druggists in that part of town, even after seven laborious hours had been spent in cleaning a wheelbarrow load of old medicine bottles with hydrant water. As a result, the partners were disappointed by their failure to dispose of a crop of "greens," although they had uprooted specimens of that decorative and unappetizing dandelion, with such persistence and energy that the Schofields' and Williams' lawns looked curiously haggard for the rest of that summer.

The fit passed, business languished, became extinct. The dog days had set in. One August afternoon was so hot that even boys sought indoor shade. In the dimness of the vacant carriage house of the stable, lounged Masters Penrod, Schofield, Samuel Williams, Maurice Levy, George Bassett and Herman. They sat still and talked. It was a hot day, but a rare truth, when boys devote themselves principally to conversation, and this day was that hot.

The elders should beware such days. For hours when the fierceness of weather forces inaction and boys in groups are quiet. The more closely volcanoes, western rivers, ultraglycerin and boys are pent, the deadlier is their action at the point of outbreak. Thus, parents and guardians should look for outbreaks of the most singular violence and of the most peculiar nature during the confining weather of February and August.

The thing which befell upon this broiling afternoon began to brew and stew peacefully enough. All was innocence and languor; no one could have foretold the eruption.

They were upon their great theme: "When I get to be a man." Being human, though boys, they considered their present estate too commonplace to be dwelt upon. So, when the old men gather, they say: "When I was a boy." It really is the land of now-adays that we never discover.

"When I'm a man," said Sam Williams, "I'm goin' to hire me a couple of colored waiters to swing me in a hammock and keep pourin' ice water on me all day out of those waterin' cans they sprinkle flowers from. I'll hire you for one of 'em, Herman."

"No; you ain't goin' to," said Herman promptly. "You ain't no flower. But nev' nahn' nat, anyway. Ain't nobody goin' hire me when I'm a man. Goin' be my own boss. I'm go' to be a railroad man!"

"You mean like a superintendent, or something like that, and sell tickets?" asked Penrod.

"Sup'ly-nv' nahn' nat! Sell tickets? No suh! Go be a p'tub! My uncle a p'otub right now. Sold gote buttons—'oh, oh!'"

"Generals get a lot more buttons than porters," said Penrod. "Generals!"

"Potubs make the 'es' fitin'." Herman interrupted. "My uncle spen' mo' money 'n a white man's town."

"Well, I rather be a general," said Penrod, "for a senator, or something like that."

"Senators live in Washington," Maurice Levy contradicted the information. "I been there. Washington ain't so much. Nigh'ra falls is a hundred times as good as Washington. So's 'Thistle City. I was there too. I been everywhere there is. I—"

"Well, anyway," said Sam Williams, raising his voice in order to obtain the floor, "anyway, I'm goin' to lay in a hammock all day and have ice water sprinkled on top o' me, and I'm goin' to lay there all night, too, and the next day, I'm goin' to lay there a couple o' years maybe."

"I bet you don't!" exclaimed Maurice. "What'd you do in winter?"

"What?"

"What you goin' to do when it's winter, out in a hammock with water sprinkled on top o' you all day? I bet you!"

"I'd stay right there," Sam declared, with strong conviction, blinking as he looked out through the open doors at the dazzling lawn and trees, trembling in the heat. "They couldn't sprinkle too much for me!"

"It'd make icicles all over you, and—"

"I wish it would," said Sam. "I'd eat 'em up."

"And I'd snow on you!"

"Yay! I'd swallow it as fast as it'd come down. I wish I had a barrel o' snow right now. I wish this whole barn was full of it. I wish they wasn't anything in the whole world except just good ole snow."

Penrod and Herman rose and went out to the hydrant, where they drank long and ardently. Sam was still talking about snow when they returned.

"No, I wouldn't just roll in it. I'd stick it all round inside my clothes and fill my hat. No, I'd freeze a big pile of it all hard, and I'd roll her out flat and then I'd carry her down to some ole tailor's and have him make me a suit out of her, and—"

"Can't you keep still about your ole snow?" demanded Penrod petulantly. "Make me so thirsty I can't keep still, and I've drunk so much now I bet I bust. That ole hydrant water's mighty near hot, anyway."

"I'm goin' to have a big store when I grow up," volunteered Maurice.

"Candy store?" asked Penrod.

"No, sir. I'll have candy in it, but not to eat so much. It's goin' to be a department store—ladies' clothes, gentlemen's clothes, neckties, china goods, leather goods, nice lines in woolings and lace goods."

"Yay! I wouldn't give a five for a cent marble for your whole store," said Sam. "Would you, Penrod?"

"Not for ten of 'em, not for a million of 'em. I'm goin' to have—"

"Wait!" exclaimed Maurice. "You'd be foolish, because they'd be a toy department in my store where they'd be a hundred marbles. So how much would you think your five for a cent marble counts for? And when I'm keepin' my store I'm goin' to get married."

"Yay!" shrieked Sam derisively. "Married! Listen!" Penrod and Herman joined in the howl of contempt.

"Certainly I'll get married," asserted Maurice stoutly. "I'll get married to Marjorie Jones. She likes me awful good, and I'm her beau."

"What makes you think so?" inquired Penrod in a cryptic voice.

"Because she's my beau, too," came the prompt answer. "I'm her beau because she's my beau. I guess that's plenty reason. I'll get married to her as soon as I get my store running nice."

Penrod looked upon him darkly, but for the moment held his peace.

"Married!" jeered Sam Williams. "Married to Marjorie Jones! You're the only boy I ever heard say he was goin' to get married. I wouldn't get married for—why, I wouldn't get married for—"

Unable to think of any inducement the mere mention of which would not be ridiculously incommensurate, he proceeded: "I wouldn't do it. What you want to get married for? What do married people do except just come home tired and worry around and kind of soid? You better not do it, M'rice. You'll be mighty sorry."

"Everybody gets married," stated Maurice, holding his ground. "They gotta."

"I'll bet I don't," Sam returned hotly. "They better catch me before they tell me I have to. Anyway, I bet nobody has to get married unless they want to."

"They do, too," insisted Maurice. "They gotta."

"Who told you?"

"Look at what my own papa told me!" cried Maurice, heated with argument. "Didn't he tell me your own papa had to marry your mamma or else he'd never got to handle a cent of her money? Certainly people gotta marry. Everybody. You don't know anybody over twenty years old that isn't married except maybe teachers."

"Look at policemen!" shouted Sam triumphantly. "You don't s'pose anybody can make policemen get married? I reckon, do you?"

"Well, policemen maybe," Maurice was forced to admit. "Policemen and teachers don't, but everybody else gotta."

"Well, I'll be a policeman," said Sam. "Then I guess they won't come around tellin' me I have to get married. What you want to do?"

"Chief police," said the laconic Penrod.

"What you?" Sam inquired of quiet George Bassett.

"I am going to be," said George consciously, "a minister."

This announcement created a sensation so profound that it was followed by silence. Herman was the first to speak.

"You mean preachin'?" he asked incredulously. "You go preach?"

"Yes," answered George, looking like St. Cecilia at the organ.

Herman was impressed. "You know all 'er preachin' talk?"

"I'm going to learn it," said George simply.

"How long kin you holter?" asked Herman doubtfully.

"He can't holter at all," Penrod interposed with scorn. "He holters like a girl. He's the poorest holter in town."

Herman shook his head. Evidently he thought George's chance of being ordained very slender. Nevertheless a final question put to the candidate by the colored expert seemed to admit one ray of hope.

"How good kin you climb a pole?"

"He can't climb one at all," Penrod answered for George. "Over at Sam's turning pole you ought to see him try to—"

"Preachers don't have to climb poles," George said with dignity.

"Good ones do," declared Herman. "Es' one ev' I hear, he climb up an' down same as a circus man. One n'cm big 'vivals outen when we livin' on a fahm, preachin' climb big pole right in a middle o' the church, what was to hol' roof up. He climb way high up, an' holter: 'Goin' to heaven, goin' to hev'n, goin' to hev'n now. Halle lujah, praise my Lawd!'"

Herman possessed that extraordinary facility for vivid acting which is the great native gift of his race, and he enchaind his listeners. They sat fascinated and spellbound.

"Herman, tell that again!" said Penrod, breathlessly.

Herman, nothing loath, accepted the encore and repeated the Miltonic episode, expanding it somewhat, and dwelling with a fine art upon those portions of the narrative which he perceived to be most exciting to his audience.

The effect was immense and instant. Penrod sprang to his feet.

"George Bassett couldn't do that to save his life," he declared. "I'm goin' to be a preacher! I'd be all right for one, wouldn't I, Herman?"

"So am I!" Sam Williams echoed loudly. "I guess I can do it if you can. I'd be bette'n Penrod, wouldn't I, Herman?"

"I can too!" Maurice shouted. "I got a stronger voice than anybody here, and I'd like to know what!"

The three clamored together indistinguishably, each asserting his qualifications for the ministry according to Herman's theory, which had been accepted by these sudden converts without question.

"Listen to me!" Maurice bellowed, proving his claim to at least the voice by drowning the others. "Maybe I can't climb a pole so good, but who can holter louder'n this? Listen to me—"

"Shut up!" cried Penrod, irritated. "Go to heaven, go to—"

"Go-o-o-h," exclaimed George Bassett, profoundly shocked.

Sam and Maurice, awed by Penrod's daring, ceased from turmoil, staring wide eyed.

"You cursed and swore!" said George.

"I did not!" cried Penrod hotly. "That isn't swearing."

"You said, 'Go to a big H,'" said George.

"I did not! I said, 'Go to heaven,' before I said a big H. That isn't swearing, is it, Herman? It's almost what the preacher said. Ain't it, Herman? It ain't swearing now any more—not if you put 'go to heaven' with it. Is it, Herman? You can say it all you want to, long as you say 'go to heaven' first. Can't you, Herman? Anybody can say it if the preacher says it. Can't they, Herman? I guess I know when I ain't swearing. Don't I, Herman?"

Judge Herman ruled for the defendant, and Penrod was considered to have carried his point. With fine consistency the conclave established that it was proper for the general public to "say H" provided "go to heaven."

"He's too sissy to be a preacher!" cried Maurice.

preux was pronounced a perfect dism-fectant, removing all color of implety or insult, and, with the exception of George Bassett (who maintained that the minister's words were "going" and "gone," not "go"), all the boys proceeded to exercise their new privilege so lavishly that they tired of it.

But there was no diminution of evangelical ardor. Again were heard the clamors of dispute as to which was the best qualified for the ministry, each of the claimants appealing passionately to Herman, who, pleased, but confused, appeared to be incapable of arriving at a decision.

During a pause George Bassett asserted his prior rights. "Who said it best, I'd like to know?" he demanded.

"I was going to be a minister from long back of today, I guess. And I guess I said I was going to be a minister right today before any of you said anything at all. Didn't I, Herman?"

"You heard me. Didn't you, Herman? That's the very thing started you talking about it. Wasn't it, Herman?"

"You're right," said Herman. "You the first one to say it."

Penrod, Sam and Maurice immediately lost faith in Herman. They turned from him and fell hotly upon George.

"What if you did say it first?" Penrod shouted. "You couldn't be a minister if you were a hundred years old!"

"I bet his mother wouldn't let him be one," said Sam. "She never lets him do anything."

"She would too," retorted George. "Ever since I was little she—"

"He's too sissy to be a preacher!" cried Maurice. "Listen at his squeaky voice!"

"I'm going to be a better minister," shouted George, "than all three of you put together. I could do it with my left hand!"

Drive in the Western War Zone Continues.

HALT GERMAN ATTACK

French Capture Positions in Champagne and Hold All Ground in Artois Region.

London, Sept. 28.—With all the activity that has characterized the fighting during the drive of the past two days, the allied forces are pressing their successes, and the official statement issued in Paris says the fighting in the Champagne region, as well as in the Arras district, where the British and French are attacking, continues.

To the north of Arras there has been no material change, but along the front to the west of the Argonne the French claim more gains.

The French statement adds that the Germans began another offensive movement in the Argonne, but that it was completely checked and that the German losses were heavy.

An earlier official report from the French war office announced that in the Champagne district more Teuton positions had been occupied and that gains in the Artois region, in north-western France had been maintained.

The German war office announces a check to the new offensive movement in the neighborhood of Lille, while the British attacks in other sectors also are said to have broken down with heavy losses to the attacking forces. The Germans further claim that the French drive has made no further progress between Rheims and the Argonne.

Military critics estimate that the German killed and wounded in the big battles of the last two days in the Artois and Champagne regions must equal the number of prisoners taken. Hence, they reckon the Germans' total losses at not less than 40,000, equalling the size of an army corps.

Reports from the front say that only twenty minutes was required for the French to capture the village of Perches, in Champagne. While awaiting the moment for the attack, the French soldiers rested behind their lines, joking and putting their arms in perfect order.

The bright glow from the slow burning illuminating rockets and the glare of exploding projectiles lighted up the entire zone of action during two nights.

"After a few hours of intense fire, our hopes that our batteries were dominating the situation were transferred to certain conditions," says a wounded officer who took part in the battle. "The moment of the attack was set for dawn. When the charge was sounded whole battalions, reinforced by reserves, bounded forward. The rush was so impetuous that the Germans still alive and unwounded in the battered works seemed dazed and unable to resist. They were disarmed and pushed back for our reserves to pick up, while the attacking line went on."

"There was little or no musketry. The bayonet did most of the work. The proportion of dead to wounded and prisoners was large. What was left of entire companies threw up their hands at the sight of the deadly execution by the Zouaves."

The general impression of wounded men brought from the field is that the affair of Perches is only a beginning of the allied effort.

BODIES OF 30 DEAD MEXICANS FOUND

Mystery as to How They Met Their Death.

Galveston, Texas, Sept. 28.—Thirty dead Mexicans have been found within the past twenty-four hours near San Benito, Mission, Progress, Chapin and Mercedes, Texas.

The bodies are lying along the roads and in the brush. Whether they were killed in fights or were shot down on sight cannot be learned.

Haired for all Mexicans along the river was manifested in demonstrations, when even Mexican employees at some of the ranches were driven away. So far as can be learned no Americans have lost their lives.

Residents at the places near where bodies were found profess to know nothing of how the Mexicans met their death. A bullet hole generally in the head, told the tale.

Eight Mexicans are reported killed in battles in Hidalgo and Sagu counties. The fights took place some twenty miles from the river after several raids had been made. No soldiers took part in the fighting.

From various places along the river comes the report that Mexican soldiers are again entrenching themselves. Army officials declare that because there is a lull in activities trouble is not over, and advise citizens to not to approach the boundary.

RAIDS BY ZAPATA BANDITS

Mexico City Again is Menaced by Big Army Under Brigand.

Washington, Sept. 28.—Zapata, not Villa, may prevent recognition of Carranza and his followers.

With greatly augmented ranks, he is menacing Mexico City and the Vera Cruz-Mexico City railway. So serious is the situation that Carranza has been compelled to withdraw a portion of his forces from Torreon to prevent communication between the capital and coast entirely being cut off.

Poison Surrounds Bandit in Swamp

New Castle, Pa., Sept. 28.—Bloodhounds have trailed the thief who took $1,600 from Mrs. Samuel Levine on Saturday, after blinding her with pepper, to the tamarac swamp, five miles east of the city. The man suspected of the crime is known to be well armed. Police and men of the district have surrounded the swamp.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Bill Killefer, Philadelphia Nationals' Backstop.

William Killefer, first string catcher of the Philadelphia Nationals, is considered by experts to be one of the best backstops in the game. He is lightning fast and throws the ball to bases with splendid accuracy and great speed. Very few bases are stolen when Bill is on duty behind the plate. In holding up pitchers he is in a class by himself. With the bat also Mr. Killefer is very handy, being considered the best sacrifice hitter in the National league, and as a pinch hitter he is feared by managers and pitchers. Killefer is a pupil of Charley Doolin, who is now catching for McGraw's Giants.

Developer of Pitchers.

If nothing else is absolutely proved by this year of baseball at least one thing will be established as almost undeniable in any quarter—Wilbert Robinson is the greatest developer and handler of pitchers in the game today. If not the greatest of all time. The Brooklyn manager now has a pitching staff for this season that outclasses any other in the National league and that outclasses at least even up with the powerful hurling corps of the Red Sox and White Sox, which represent the class of the American circuit in this line. At the beginning of the current season the Dodgers' pitching strength was the most problematical element to be found anywhere in the field of sixteen clubs that faced the barrier. Robby has developed them into stars.

Bender Hopes to Come Back.

"Chief" Bender, the Athletics' ex-star pitcher, who has been released by the Baltimore Federals, declares that he has plenty of good pitching left in him and that he will come back.

Whether he will play again this season Bender does not know, but it is likely that he will rest until next spring. Bender refuses to "mild" his release from the Baltimore Federal league team, but admits he had a poor year.

"I have never tried to bluff a defeat or a failure of any sort, and I won't start now. I had a bad season with a bad ball team, but don't think that I am through. I still have several years of good pitching left in me, and I will be back."

Gardner, Champion Golfer.

The amateur golf championship of the United States went to the west again, after several years' stay in the east, when Robert A. Gardner of the Hinsdale (Ill.) Country club, a former Yale golfer and world's champion pole vaulter, defeated John G. Anderson of the Swaney Country club of Mount Vernon, N. Y., in the final match at Detroit, Mich. The margin of victory was 5 up and 4 to play. Gardner achieved national recognition as a golfer in 1909, when he won the amateur championship from Chandler Egan of Chicago at Wheaton, Ill.

New Tennis Champion.

Youth was served at the West Side Tennis club courts, at Forest Hills, N. Y., when William M. Johnston, the twenty-year-old California star, won the national tennis crown, defeating in the final round Maurice E. McLoughlin in a four set match. Johnston's victory keeps the championship bowl in competition for at least another year. Had McLoughlin carried off the honors he would have been entitled to permanent possession of the trophy, as he already had two victories to his credit, and three are required to win the cup.

POPULAR MECHANICS

Temper For Butcher Knives.

Above all, use good steel and forge at an orange heat as much as possible, then finish by refining the steel to a low heat with water and light hammering, but don't let the steel get cold enough for the water to set on it, as at that heat it would tend to crystallize the steel, says the Blacksmith and Wheelwright. Now reheat to a low red and lay it down until it gets cool enough, so that a pine stick rubbed or scraped on the edge will not brown; then dip in hot machine or linseed oil and lay down until cold. This keeps the air from the steel and removes the strain, or, in other words, equalizes the steel, thus preventing cracking and springing out of shape and also to remove all hard spots caused by forging. Now heat to a bright cherry color and plunge in the same oil; remove and wipe the oil off. You will find that it can be bent or straightened on the anvil, but the air, which is life to everything, soon hardens the steel. When cold draw your temper with a furnace or a piece of hot iron to a purple or dark blue and then let the air finish cooling it.

Soft Hammers.

For driving bolts and keys and straps and other work about machinery a babbitt or lead hammer is better than a copper hammer, which hardens the more it is used, says the Automobile Dealer and Repairer. To keep the lead hammer from getting out of shape take a piece of copper pipe, drill a hole in one side of it and fit with a handle, and then fill in the hollow of the copper pipe with lead. Even better than the lead hammer are hardwood blocks on end. Put against part to be driven and strike with a hammer.

Tempering Drills.

Work your drills at a low heat and hammer them well so as to pack the steel. Then when you have finished your drill lay on the forge to cool down. When cold heat to whatever degree of heat that your steel will harden at. Do not get a long heat on the bit, but as short as possible. Then plunge in water with the drill taken off the water and leave in the tub till perfectly cold, and you will not have much trouble with your drills breaking off.

Electric Vulcanizer For Tires.

With an electric vulcanizer just brought out it is possible to vulcanize a patch or casing out as well and as quickly, according to reports, as it can be done in a garage, says Popular Mechanics. The new vulcanizer is a light and compact device that operates on six volts and takes its current from the storage battery of the car. It is equipped with six feet of cord and can be connected with any light socket on the car. A thermometer attached to the vulcanizer permits the heat to be regulated to any required degree.

Black Varnish For Iron.

A good black varnish for cast iron and forgings can be made of half a pound of lampblack, half a pound of resin, one pound of asphaltum, one quart of turpentine spirits and a small quantity of linseed oil. The lampblack is first rubbed up with the linseed oil, no more oil being used than necessary for this purpose. The other ingredients are then mixed with it thoroughly. The varnish will be found to be durable. Blacksmith and Wheelwright.

When to Use Bronze Coatings.

For bearings that must stand heavy pressures some form of bronze or brass is used. A bronze or a phosphor bronze is best when the bearing must also stand high temperatures, such as the piston pin bearing of a gas engine where the piston is attached to the end of the connecting rod. Here the bearing must withstand the heavy pressure and high temperatures produced by the explosions within the engine cylinder.

Deodorizing Lard Buckets.

Lard buckets are the most easily obtained and the most satisfactory of utensils in which to pack food or cook for a small picnic or camping party, but it is very difficult to remove the odor of the lard. This may be easily accomplished by boiling the grounds from the coffee pot in the bucket with about one pint of water.

Care of the Varnish Brush.

Turpentine is best to keep the varnish brush in, because it not only imparts the spring or elasticity of the brush, but the turpentine gets into the varnish and causes specks.

Varnishing a Tennis Racket.

An easy way to put varnish in the grooves of a tennis racket is to use a medicine dropper.

Clabby to Fight Les Darcy.

Because the teachers of the grammar school of Camden, N. J., for three days in succession had sent his small sons home when they appeared in school collared and with the neckbands of their shirts turned in Frank V. L. Turner, a Philadelphia newspaper man, living in Merchantville, is planning legal action which will determine whether the boys must wear collars while women teachers and girl pupils wear low necked dresses in hot weather. Mr. Turner has appealed to State Commissioner of Education Kendall without success, and papers have been drawn which will be served on the board of education, principal of the school and teachers.

BAGGING A BEAR.

Doing It, Too, in a Care Free, Nonchalant Sort of a Way.

An interesting story was told to me by a trapper to whom I had given shelter at my campfire on Kootenai lake. He said that he had just been up in the Selkirk's guiding a man named Roosevelt, who wanted to get a cinnamon or silver tip grizzly—I have forgotten which—that they had got one and that he had just said good-bye to his employer, then police commissioner in New York. He said: "That man Roosevelt is the bravest man I ever saw. He is very nearsighted and has a pocketful of different kinds of glasses. We were going up a narrow trail in the grizzly country when I saw around the turn, not very far ahead, a big bear shambling down. I dropped back and motioned to Roosevelt to look around the corner. He stepped slightly forward and saw the bear not over a couple of hundred feet away.

"The trail was narrow, on one side a cliff, on the other a ravine. Instead of putting up his gun immediately and shooting, Roosevelt groped around in his pocket until he found the pair of glasses that he wanted, unobtrusively removed the pair he wore, rubbed, put on and adjusted the others and when the bear got within fifty feet of him took deliberate aim and killed him."

In picturesque language the old guide said that any son of a gun who would take the time to change his glasses when a grizzly was loping down the trail within a few yards of him was the bravest man he had ever seen.—Albert R. Ledoux in Mining and Scientific Press.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

SUNDAY SUPPERS.

SHRIMP PATTIES.—This recipe calls for one cupful of shrimps, one cupful of canned or fresh peas, four tablespoons of butter, two tablespoons of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth teaspoonful of paprika and one and one-half cups of milk. Melt the butter and add the flour, with salt and paprika, stirring constantly; then pour the milk on gradually as soon as the sauce thickens. Add the shrimps, broken in pieces, and the peas, drained from their liquor. Fill into patties which have been heated and serve at once.

Veal Pie.—Cut into small pieces a pound of veal and two very thin slices of ham. Simmer in water enough to cover until tender. Put the meat into a baking dish in alternate layers. Add a large teaspoonful of gelatin to the stock, season well, strain over the meat. Cover with a rich biscuit crust, bake and chill. Serve very cold.

Creamed Dried Beef With Boiled Eggs.

Make a white sauce of one tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of flour and one large cupful of milk. Add to this 5 cents' worth of dried beef cut small and two hard boiled eggs cut into small pieces. Serve on toast.

Mixed Baked Veal.—Materials: Left-over veal, filling and gravy from Sunday's dinner, a cupful of cold boiled rice, a tablespoonful of onion juice or half a teaspoonful of grated nutmeg, a tablespoonful of finely cut parsley, salt and pepper, a cupful of left-over stewed tomatoes or thick gravy, a quarter cupful of breadcrumbs, a teaspoonful of drippings.

Utensils—Food chopper, mixing bowl, measuring cup, teaspoon, tablespoon, knife, brick shaped pan.

How to Make.—The meat, filling and rice are put through the food chopper, gravy or tomato, or both, onion and favoring are added (the reason the amount of seasoning cannot be given as left over foods are usually seasoned), mix well, brush pan with drippings, put in mixture, cover with breadcrumbs and place in moderate oven from thirty to thirty-five minutes.

"TIPPERARY" NOW A HYMN.

Baptist Ministers Adopt Popular Tune and Add Religious Words.

More than 100 Baptist ministers adapted the tune of "Tipperary" to the words of a hymn of their own composition at the weekly conference in Philadelphia as a means of attracting the attention to things religious.

"We should utilize popular ditties which everybody whistles and sings in order to focus attention upon the church," declared the Rev. Clarence Woolston, the author.

Here's the way the chorus goes:

It's a good thing to be a Christian;

It's the best thing I know;

It's a good thing to be a Christian;

Wherever you may go.

Goodby, sin and Satan; farewell all that's bad;

It's a good thing to be a Christian,

For it makes my heart glad.

The tune "caught on" at once in the meeting.

QUITS CHURCH FOR ARMY.

Seattle Minister to Resume Duty as Artillery Captain.

The Rev. Arthur P. S. Hyde, who during three years of missionary and church work had maintained his rank as a captain of artillery in the United States army, announced his resignation as pastor of St. Clement's Episcopal church in Seattle so that he might return to full duty as an army officer.

Captain Hyde said he intended to devote his entire time to instructing the coast artillery reserve corps of the Washington national guard, to which he has been assigned by the war department.

Prepared Especially For This Newspaper by Pictorial Review

WHOLLY PLEASING IS THIS FROCK.

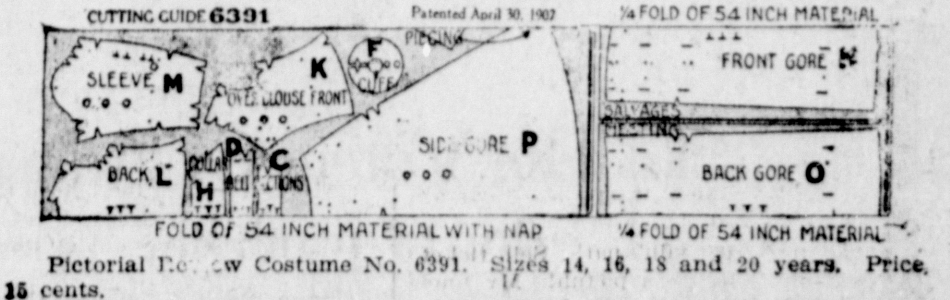

Decidedly chic and serviceable is this frock of blue indestructible voile, trimmed with vest, collar and revers of white satin, although any other color may be substituted. There are two ways of developing the front of the waist, however, for instead of rolling back, the revers may be turned forward and fastened in pointed effect across the bust with a button or other ornament. The four-piece skirt is pleated and closes at the left side front. The vest is part of an underbody with high neck, "kilt" without sleeves, outlining the lower front, the belt and the bodice in narrow silk braid. To make the dress average size, requires 3 1/2 yards 54-inch material, with 3/4 yard silk 36 inches wide for underbody front and back, and 3/4 yard 2-inch belting for stay.

The underbody front and back are cut from a single width of the 36-inch material, but in cutting out the skirt and overbust of the dress the 54-inch voile will have to be folded to be used to best advantage. One-half fold of material is required for all except the front and back gores of the skirt, which are cut from 1/4 fold of 54-inch voile.

The back, collar and belt sections are laid along a lengthwise fold of the goods so that they will be seamless. The side gore is cut on a lengthwise thread of the voile so that the two sides are cut at once, insuring uniformity. The sleeve and overbust front are placed on a lengthwise thread of material, opposite the back, collar and belt sections. Next to the overbust front is the cuff, and following the cuff is the piecing for the side gores, the piecing being laid along the selvage edge.

In cutting the back and front gores of the skirt from a quarter fold of material be sure that the selvages meet; then see that the sections for these gores are laid along the lengthwise fold. Reference to the cutting guide will show just how this must be arranged.

The neckline can be changed to any desired shape, but the "V" and standing collar effects are most popular.

MANY LIVES LOST IN TUBE BUILDING

More Killed in Construction
Work Than Passengers.

EIGHT PERISH IN CAVE-IN.

Record of Subway Building in New York Replete With Disaster, While For Years Millions Have Traveled in Completed Tubes With Comparatively Little Loss of Life.

Subway construction in New York has been fraught with more accidents in which fatalities were recorded than the actual operation of trains in the completed tubes, exclusive of persons run down by trains. Disasters were frequent in the building of the Interborough until it was opened eleven years ago. Since that time there has been only one accident of importance—that of Jan. 6, in which 500 persons groped their way in the tunnel through gases, and in which one life was lost. This caused several hearings before the public service commission, at which testimony was given regarding the connection between the accident at Broadway and Fifty-third street and the piercing of a cable by a cell eleven blocks downtown, where work for the new Seventh Avenue subway was going on.

Two accidents marked the building of the Interborough. The first was in January, 1902, when six persons were killed by an explosion at Forty-first street and Park avenue and the Grand Union and Murray Hill hotels were damaged. Two months later two houses on Park avenue at Thirty-fifth street caved in.

On Dec. 28, 1911, two laborers lost their lives in a cave-in in Fourth avenue, Brooklyn.

Fourteen More Killed.

Eight accidents have occurred in construction work in New York within the last three and one-half years, in which fourteen lives were lost. The first was on March 11, 1912, when four men were buried in Fifty-seventh street, west of Lexington avenue. One of these lost his life. A small landslide occurred in the excavation where the men were at work and the four fell twenty-six feet.

Two weeks later Lexington avenue, between Eighty-seventh and Eighty-eighth streets, collapsed from curb to curb, and the street surface dropped forty feet. This followed an extra heavy blast, and a street car—the rails being supported by large beams—narrowly escaped the fate of the Seventh avenue trolley which fell into the excavation.

The most serious accident occurred on June 14, 1913, when ten persons were killed by tons of earth and bowlders hurled upon them in a cave-in at Lexington avenue and Fifty-sixth street. Another explosion at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street and Lexington avenue followed a few minutes later.

Perishes in a Cave-In.

One laborer died in a cave-in on Jan. 3, 1914, at Lexington avenue and Sixty-first street, and two others were hurt. Similar to the manner in which it was contended that the January, 1914, accident was caused, a drill mishap blocked the subway last March at Times square. Clouds of smoke came from the excavation, but no one was hurt. In the same month a blast shook the windows of Broadway stores at Thirty-eighth street, which caused women, thinking there had been an explosion, to run shrieking through the streets.

Two weeks later faulty underpinning caused the sidewalk at Broadway and Twenty-eighth street to sink four feet. The police reserves were called and found that no one had been killed, although several persons were shocked by their fall. In June a water main break drenched the new Seventh avenue excavation at Forty-third street.

Eight persons were killed and scores injured when an entire block caved in recently at Seventh avenue and Twenty-fifth street.

Mrs. Borland's Relative

By MAY C. ETHERIDGE

When Tom Borland married Susan Gilraith, Tom, being master of a tramp steamer and at sea nearly all the time, he hoped that a little stranger would soon happen that way to keep his wife company during his absence. Tom's communications from home were very irregular, because his itinerant life was often uncertain. If on arriving at one point it would pay better to go to another than the one he had expected to steer for he would alter his plans, so that letters addressed according to instructions would lie in the postoffice unclaimed. His wife heard from him with as much regularity as could be expected from a sailor, but sometimes months would intervene between his receipt of letters from her.

The Borland home was just within the entrance to a narrow bay into which Captain Borland on his return always took his ship and docked her. When he came from the northward, as he usually did, on turning into the harbor he could see his little home nestling up on the heights, and when his wife knew that he was due she would be on the lookout for him. Then how joyful to hear the sight of the ship in which he came and to hear the welcome he saw waving from an upper window. But if soon after rounding in he didn't see that signal he was seized with fear that something of a grievous nature had happened.

On one of Captain Borland's voyages, after having been away almost a year and having changed his itinerary so often that he had not heard from his wife for months, he turned the bluff at the entrance of the bay anxiously. He had found an opportunity to send a letter to her advising her of the probable time of his arrival and hoping that within a short time after coming into view of his home he would see the usual signal.

When rounding the bluff he stood on deck, binoculars in hand, watching for what would relieve his anxiety and assure him that his wife was living and well. But, though he raised his glasses often, he was every time disappointed. At last, when he reached a point nearest to his house, the figure of a woman appeared on the porch and, waving, but with the assistance of his glasses he saw that it was not that of his wife.

Captain Borland hardly knew what to think of all this. But he surmised either that his wife was dead, that she was ill or that something had occurred to take her away from home. Anxiously he sailed on to a point near the dock and, after dropping anchor, entered a boat with six sailors to pull him to a point on the shore just below his house. As soon as the boat's nose scraped the ground he leaped ashore and walked hastily up the incline.

He was met at his door by a woman in the uniform of a trained nurse, who seemed disposed to block his entrance till he informed her that he was at his own home. Then she told him that his wife was ill, but not dangerously ill; that the doctor was with her, that the patient had been informed of his expected arrival and that if he came before the doctor left he was to wait. The captain began to fire questions at the woman, who, telling him that she was needed in the sickroom, went upstairs.

The captain walked the floor anxiously. Half an hour passed when he heard the door of his wife's bedroom open, and his family physician came out and down into the room where Borland was waiting. After greeting the captain he said:

"Your wife is ill, and my presence here is necessary for I can't tell just how long. She has requested me to tell you it is her wish that you remain away until I am able to assure you that—well, that the crisis has passed." "Then she is dangerously ill?" "I don't say that, though in such cases there is always danger. But I can assure you that all is going well with her and before night at furthest she will be able to see you."

"Surely she should be able to see her husband at any time." "She is, but it is her wish to wait till she will not be obliged to greet you in her present condition after your long absence. She has commissioned me to say that it would be well for you to return to your ship to attend to her docking and such other matters as are requisite on coming in from a voyage."

The captain assented to this and, going down to his boat, was pulled to his ship.

Borland was especially cast down at returning to find his wife ill, for he had good luck on his voyage and had done some profitable trading which would enable him to buy his ship and thereafter be its owner as well as master. However, he docked the vessel and then waited news from the invalid. It was 9 o'clock at night when he was summoned to his home and when he reached it, after being told that the crisis was passed, was told by the doctor that a relative of his wife's was with her, but this made no difference and he might go in and see her at once.

On opening the bedroom door there lay Mrs. Borland on the bed and beside her the relative—or, more properly speaking, the little stranger whose coming the couple had so ardently longed for.
